Cosmopolitan 14 EUR

Absolut Citron, Cointreau, Lime Juice, Cranberry Juice

The legendary Cosmopolitan is a simple cocktail with a big history. It reached its height of popularity in the 1990s, when the famous TV show “Sex and the City” was at its peak. The pink-hued Martini was a favorite of the characters on the show. According to Gary Regan, the original Cosmopolitan was created by South Beach bartender Cheryl Cook. Eager to invent a new cocktail for the Martini glass, Cook riffed on the classic Kamikaze using a newly introduced citrus-flavored vodka plus a splash of cranberry juice.

CLASSIC COCKTAILS

Manhattan 12 EUR

Makers Mark, Gonzalez Byass Red Vermouth, Angostura Bitters, Marashino Cherry,
As with many classic cocktails, the origins of the Manhattan are disputed, but one popular theory claims the drink came to be at the Manhattan Club in New York in the early 1870s. The story goes that one Dr. Iain Marshall created the drink especially for a banquet in honor of presidential candidate Samuel Tilden hosted by Winston Churchill's mother, Lady Randolph Churchill, at the Manhattan Club. Legend has it that the drink proved so popular during the dinner, that it soon spread outside the club to other New York bars, with punters requesting to try "the Manhattan cocktail".

Rob Roy 16 EUR

Glenmorangie Single Malt, Sweet Vermouth, Angostura Bitters
A Manhattan made with Scotch rather than Canadian whisky is a Rob Roy. It was originally invented at New York's Waldorf Astoria Hotel in 1894 to celebrate the Broadway premiere of an operetta loosely based on the life of the Scottish folk hero Rob Roy.

Old Fashioned 12 EUR

Makers Mark, Angostura Bitters
The Old Fashioned was created at the Pendennis Club in Louisville, Kentucky

Negroni 10 EUR

Bombay Sapphire, Campari, Red Vermouth
Created in Florence, Italy, in the 1920s, at the Casoni Bar, when customer Count Camillo Negroni asked the barman to add gin to his Americano.

Mojito 10 EUR

Diplomatico Blanco, Lime, Simple Syrup, Soda Water, Mint Leaves
In Havana, Hemingway liked to have his Daiquiris at La Floridita and his Mojitos at La Bodeguita del Medio. Although La Bodeguita is credited with popularizing the Mojito, there's a lot of controversy about the drink's origin. Some believe Constante Ribailagua of the Floridita made the first Mojito. The Mojito was a farmer's drink, with its origins sometime around 1850, when the rum industry in Cuba modernized. Those years brought important elements of the drink to Cuba for the first time, like ice and charged water.

Margarita13 EURDon Julio Blanco, Cointreau, Lime Juice*

Marjorie King, a former Broadway dancer, the singer Peggy (i.e. Margaret) Lee, and Margarita Henkel, the daughter of a former German ambassador to Mexico are all touted as the possible namesake of the margarita cocktail. But in fact, the cocktail might not be named in honor of anyone at all—margarita is the Spanish word for “daisy,” and so one theory claims the drink was simply a variation of an earlier Texan cocktail called the “tequila daisy.” There's an old drink called the Daisy, which is a mix of brandy, triple sec, and lemon juice. According to legend, one day, a bartender in Tijuana was making a Daisy and accidentally grabbed a bottle of tequila instead of brandy. The accident became a hit at the bar, and it was quickly dubbed a Margarita (the Spanish word for daisy).

Moscow Mule13 EURAbsolut Elyx, Ginger Beer, Lime Juice*

Jack Morgan ran a bar in Hollywood in the 1940s. Alongside it, he was struggling to make a success of his Cock'n'Bull ginger beer franchise. Enter the Spin Doctor, John Martin. Between them they invented the Moscow Mule, which mixed Smirnoff vodka with ginger beer. With the aid of a Polaroid camera and specially produced copper mugs, Martin set off on a tour of the country to promote their cocktail creation. He became spectacularly successful

Tom Collins12 EURBombay Sapphire, Simple Syrup, Lemon Juice, Soda Water*

The drink got its name from a prank that became we would call “viral” in the Internet age. In the 1870s, it was considered the height of wit to say to an acquaintance: “Have you seen Tom Collins?” Upon which said acquaintance would say no, and would add, in fact, he had never met Tom Collins. Then you would tell the acquaintance that Tom Collins was in a bar down the street and had been what we would describe today as “trash-talking” about him. At which point he would go off in a huff to the bar to confront the cheeky Tom Collins. Except he didn't exist. Seriously, this was a thing. In fact, it was so popular, that it became “The Great Tom Collins Hoax of 1874.”

According to the story, one bartender had the idea to mix up a drink and dub it – you guessed it – The “Tom Collins.” When the aggrieved party came into the bar and asked for “Tom Collins,” he would unwittingly have ordered a mixed drink.

VALGE TEE / WHITE TEA

Bai Mu Dan / Fujian, China

Bai Mu Dan is named after one of China's most beautiful flowers, the white peony. This is a simple, affordable white tea. The tender, down-covered buds as well as first two leaves are used, making it more inexpensive than other kinds of white teas made from buds only. Its caffeine content is very low, however, it is very refreshing. It has a mellow, sweet taste devoid of astringency.

ROHELINE TEE / GREEN TEE

Wu Lu Mountain / Zhejiang, China

A full-bodied green tea from Zhejiang province, China. The tea gardens are covered with mist all year around, being great conditions for tea production. These thinly twisted dark green leaves offer a slightly roasty cup of tea with a bold, nutty aftertaste.

Sencha Kura / Shizuoka, Japan

Sencha Kura has been steamed longer (more in fukamushi style) compared to our other sencha teas, resulting in a more full-bodied tea that has a round sweet taste and a smooth and thick texture. Yabukita tea bush varietal. Easy to brew and easy to enjoy - a great introduction to the world of senchas, as well as a great enjoyment for those who are well versed.

PU-ERH

Jing Gu 2010 SHOU / Yang Ta Village, Jing Gu County, China

Jing Gu Yang Ta village is in Jing Gu county of Simao prefecture (景谷秧塔寨). It is well known for its "Da Bai" (大白 - Big White) tea. Actually the tea here is not Camellia Sinensis rather another varietal called Camellia Taliensis. Camellia Taliensis growing in Jing Gu's red soil has prominent large fat leaves and hairy white buds. Tea from this region is well-known for its beautiful appearance, and tea sellers have been know to blend this tea with Yi Wu tea to make it (Yi Wu tea) more beautiful and bright in appearance while at the same time bolstering its sweetness and thickness.

MAITSESTATUD TEE / FLAVORED TEE

Jasmine Pearls / Fujian, China

This jasmine tea has a more subtle and refined taste than most, because it's made with high quality white tea. A fresh bud and the first leaves have been carefully rolled into pearls and later scented with fresh jasmine blossoms which are placed on bamboo sheets under and/or over the pearls only in the evening.

Earl Grey / China, Anhui

Earl Grey tea is the flavour of the citrus bergamot fruit (a cross between the sweet lemon and Seville orange), which lends the tea a lightly spicy quality. Earl Grey tea is a popular black tea blend that is scented with bergamont oil and has a very distinctive flavour and aroma. Bergamot is a lime tree that is grown in Italy and the South of France but is native to southern Vietnam, which explains its Chinese connection.

Lapsang souchong / China, Fujian

Famous pine-smoked red tea. Absolute classic. Harvested Spring 2019 from Wuyishan in Fujian, Xiao Zhong varietal. Smoked gently with pine wood.

Marrakesh mint / China

Chinese gunpowder is mixed in just the right combination with refreshing spearmint leaves. Some like this before bedtime, others whenever they need a refreshing boost. That's the dual nature of mint – most associate it with relaxation (and indeed, spearmint, a less pungent relative of peppermint, improves digestion and soothes the nervous system), but it also has stimulant properties as well, allowing people to get on with concentrating on tasks at hand.

OOLONG

Da Hong Pao / Wuyi, China

The King of Teas is how Da Hong Pao is known in China, and that name does not come easily. Growing in the likely birthplace of black and oolong teas in China, the Wuyi mountains of Fujian, Da Hong Pao has been the most respected of all Chinese teas since the Ming dynasty – legend has it that the mother of an emperor was cured after drinking tea made from certain bushes growing high up on a rock. He ordered that these bushes be cloaked with imperial red robes (Da Hong Pao means Great Red Robe).

Milky oolong / Fujian, China

Rolled tight, similar to Tie Guan Yin and other quality oolongs, this one is often people's first foray into the world of oolong... and what a journey it is. Boasting a strong, sweet but buttery smell and taste, it gives you the feeling of indulging a creamy pastry, but not suffering from the calories! Several floral hints are also detectable, most notably orchid, as well as a note of vanilla.

PUNANE-MUST TEE / RED-BLACK TEA

Darjeeling Singtom SF / Darjeeling, India

Darjeeling is world-famous as the Champagne of black (hong) teas - being a lighter less oxidized black tea, you can try to prepare it with slightly cooler water. The second flush carries a stronger body and the highly appraised muscat flavour.

English Breakfast / Africa and Sri Lanka

The English breakfast tea, however, would include a blend of Assam, Ceylon, and Kenyan teas. If you are a fan of the English Breakfast, you are in hallowed company, with the likes of Queen Victoria and John Lennon who had his own ritual when it came to English Breakfast.

PUUVILJA TEE / FRUIT INFUSION

Red Luck / Germany

Great hot or cold, at any time of the day, this mix brings together currants, redcurrants, rosehip peel, apple pieces, elderberries (which are one of the few berries effective at counteracting the effects of an ongoing cold or fever) and lilac berries. Very berry!

TAIMETEE / HERBAL TEA

Fireweed (Ivanchai) / Estonia, Valgamaa

Fireweed, commonly known as Ivanchai, was once The Tea in Europe and Russia, before Chinese tea became available and popular. It is a centuries long tradition that was largely fading away, but has luckily been revitalized in the past years.

Hemp leaves / Germany

Hemp has always had pleasant associations with relaxation. It has significant levels of calcium, minerals, vitamins, antioxidants and contains no caffeine or tannins. It also contains traces of proteins and carbohydrates, amino acids and lipids.

Its taste is flat, grassy, fresh and its overall effect is indeed relaxing and soothing. Perfect as an evening drink, mixed mix chamomile or damiana for example.

Chamomile / Germany

Chamomile is one of the oldest and most appreciated herbs. Ancient Egyptians worshipped this plant and devoted it to Ra, their god of Sun. It has grown in peoples herb gardens for centuries and has so many benefits and ways to use. Enjoy this simple yet wise and powerful plant with respect and joy!

Honeybush TOPKAPI / RSA

Honeybush grows only in a narrow coastal and mountainous stretch north and west of Cape Town, South-Africa. Honeybush's flavour is similar to rooibos' but slightly sweeter. There's little in the way of honey-flavoured overtones to the taste, but honeybush flowers do emit a distinct "honey" scent. In order to produce the sweetest flavour, honeybush plants are harvested during flowering season. This heavenly tea is pretty to look at, heavenly to smell and a treat to drink, day or night. This mix has some friendly mango, strawberry and orange peel added. Honeybush contains no caffeine.

Yerba Mate / Brazil

The real thing, as nature intended. Fresh, biting, and with a friendly bitterness you'll soon find your body craving. This is made up of young, fresh leaves, few twigs and cut evenly. It has a high chlorophyll content
